Hurricane Harvey

2017 Hurricane Harvey Deployment ASPECT Response

1 Background

On 30 August 2017 at 0445 hrs the US EPA Region 6 On-Scene Coordinator Bryant Smalley contacted ASPECT Program Manager, Dr. Mark Thomas, to activate the ASPECT aircraft and respond to support Region 6 in their response to the impacts of Hurricane Harvey.

The core of the rapid needs assessment (RNA) mission consisted of the collection of both high resolution photography and remote chemical sensing over target sites provided by the Region. These sites corresponded to water treatment, wastewater treatment and Risk Management Plans (RMP) sites within the Texas counties impacted by the storm, including the Arkema Facility. A figure showing the extent of these sites is given in Figure 1.

Overall priority for addressing the locations was provided by the Operations Chief, OSC Brescia; the initial focus was to survey locations most likely impacted by the storm/floating which included those sites nearest to the Gulf. Management of the sites and specific mission targeting was accomplished by creating a set of geographical zones internally by the ASPECT reach back team. The general design was based on proximity to the aircraft base of operation, duration of flight, flight restrictions (if any), and number of sites and is given in Figure 2.

2 ASPECT Description

The U.S. EPA ASPECT Program is the nation's only 24/7/365 emergency response airborne platform equipped with special chemical, radiological, and situational awareness instruments. ASPECT stands for Airborne Spectral Photometric Environment Collection Technology. It detects chemicals and radiation while collecting aerial photos and videos for situational awareness during an emergency (night or day). Critical information is automatically processed in the aircraft and transmitted via satellite to a team of highly skilled scientists who quickly review it before sending the results to decision makers on the ground. This can be done within 5 minutes. Because of its ability to quickly arrive onsite and turn data, ASPECT serves as an initial screening tool to help the field responders make more informed decisions based on actual measurements. ASPECT does not fly through the hazard or take air samples. All the information is collected from a safe distance using remote sensing technologies. It usually flies at about 3,000 ft above the ground but can fly much lower (or higher) if needed. A crew of four flies and operates the aircraft. The size of the reach back team varies depending on the type, size and scale of an emergency, and can provide support at the command post or from anywhere in the world via satellite communications and secure internet coordination.

3 Mission Status

Detailed summaries of ASPECT operations from 30 August 2017 through 11 September 2017 are given in Tables 1 and 2. Table 1 provides a summary of flight statistics based on flight number and date. Table 2 provides a target break down based on Zones flown.

4 Flight and Airspace Coordination

The ASPECT team and flight crew coordinated with a number of agencies as related to air space authorization and flight safety. Throughout the deployment the ASPECT crew flew under a Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) squawk code mandated due to several Temporary Flight Restrictions (TFR) active on various missions. In addition, the team coordinated with the U.S. Coast Guard and the Texas National Guard each day in an effort to reduce duplication of effort. Finally, the primary base of operation was Hobby Field with Addison municipal serving as the backup and maintenance base.

5 Aircraft Capabilities used on this survey

Chemical Detection:

The ASPECT system collects airborne infrared (IR) images and chemical screening data from a safe distance over the site (about 3,000 ft AGL). The system consists of an airborne high speed Fourier transform infrared spectrometer (FTIR) coupled with a wide-area infrared line scanner (IRLS). The ASPECT infrared (IR) systems have the ability to detect compounds in both the 8 to 12 micron (800 to 1200 cm⁻¹) and 3 to 5 micron (2000 to 3200 cm⁻¹) regions. The 8 to 12 micron region is typically known as the atmospheric window region since the band is reasonably void of water and carbon dioxide influence. Spectrally, this region is used to detect carbon - non-carbon bonded compounds. The 3 to 5 micron region is also free of water and carbon dioxide but typically does not have sufficient energy for use. This band does show use in high-energy environments such as fires. The carbon - hydrogen stretch is very common in this region.

Photographic Capabilities:

A digital Nikon DX2 camera (12.4 mega pixel CMOS 3:5 aspect ratio, 28 mm wide-angle lens) collects visible aerial imagery as part of the core data product package. The camera timing system is connected to the primary IR sensors and provides concurrent image collection when other sensors are triggered. All imagery is geo-rectified using both aircraft attitude correction (pitch, yaw, and roll) and GPS positional information. Imagery can be processed while in flight or approximately 600 frames per hour can be processed once the data are downloaded from the aircraft.

An Imperx mapping camera (29 mega pixels; mapping focal plane array) provides a similar aspect ratio and aerial coverage. Like the Nikon DX2, it is connected to the primary IR sensors and provides concurrent image collection when other sensors are triggered. These images are often digitally processed in lower resolution so they can be transmitted via satellite communication. The high resolution images (>20 MB each) are pulled from the ASPECT after the sortie and are available at a later time.

All aerial photographic images collected by the ASPECT system are ortho-rectified and geospatially validated by the reach back team. In general, this consists of conducting geo-registration using a digital elevation model (DEM) which promotes superior pixel computation and lessens topographic distortion. The image is then checked by a team member (using a Google Earth base map) for proper location and rotation

Automated Processing

Data was processed using automated algorithms onboard the aircraft with preliminary results being sent using a satellite system to the ASPECT reach back team for QA/QC analysis. Upon landing and full data transmission, preliminary data results were examined and validated by the reach back team.

6 ASPECT chemical detection

Methodology

Chemical detection with the ASPECT system is accomplished using an open-path passive infrared spectrometer. Fundamentally, most organic compounds and some inorganic compounds have a unique IR signature (e.g., finger print). Specifically, ASPECT uses two “bands” of IR consisting of the 3 to 5 micron and the 8 to 12 micron atmospheric windows for chemical detection. The system uses the natural IR background of the ground surface as a reference and extracts the IR signature of vapors between the aircraft and the ground. In essence, the sensor counts the number of gas molecules of the target gas between the aircraft and the ground. Detection is then automatically accomplished using a software algorithm known as background suppressed pattern recognition. This algorithm has been programmed to automatically detect, identify, and estimate concentrations for up to 72 chemical compounds. An additional 500+ chemical compounds listed in several infrared spectrometry libraries (e.g., Detection limits and concentrations are derived from the sensor detection metric of “parts per million - meter \(ppm-m\).” This value relates a given concentration to an atmosphere that is one meter thick \(e.g., assumes all the gas molecules are confined within one meter even though the aircraft has measured about 900 meters of atmosphere.\) Therefore, a plume thickness has to be assumed to convert \(ppm-m\) to concentration \(ppm\). In the case of ASPECT, a 10 meter plume thickness is typically assumed which is consistent with an average plume size. The “ppm-m” number is then divided by the thickness resulting in ppm. can be manually assessed.<div data-bbox=)

ASPECT Data Quality Objectives

From an operational perspective, ASPECT is a screening tool. It provides information that a chemical compound (in vapor phase) has been detected with an approximate location and its estimated concentration. It does not provide the altitude of where the gas was detected. For emergency response purposes, the most conservative assumption is to assume all the gas is in the breathing zone. Accordingly, ASPECT is one component and does not replace ground-based monitoring, where more sensitive instruments can be deployed to assess ground-based air concentrations. Furthermore, unless the release is constant with consistent weather conditions, it is highly likely the ground-based chemical concentration(s) will differ when ground-based assets arrive due to natural attenuation via dispersion and other weather conditions (i.e., stability class, rain, wind direction, etc.).

For Hurricane Harvey, the Incident Command (IC) prioritized all targets for subsequent collection. In addition to chemical data, aerial images (both visible and IR) were collected and provided to the Regional Emergency Operations Center (REOC) for situational awareness and dissemination. The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ) Toxicology Division (TD) through the Environmental Unit established a short-term health-based air monitoring comparison values (AMCV) for evaluating air monitoring data. It may not be appropriate to compare ASPECT results or other air sampling results (e.g., 24-hour canister sample) to the short-term AMVC since the short-term AMVC is based on a one-hour exposure scenario. However, a comparison can be made to help decide where to deploy limited ground-based resources to assess potential chemical exposures in the area. Hurricane Harvey adversely impacted more than 5,000 square miles and the ASPECT quick chemical monitoring/screening capabilities can be used to help decision makers make more efficient use of ground-based assets to ensure human health and the environment are protected.

Table 3 lists the chemical compounds that are included in the TCEQ short-term AMCV spreadsheet (N=149) and in the ASPECT automated detection library (N=78).

7 Data Results

ASPECT Data Structure

Several types of ASPECT data and/or products were generated as a result of the Harvey deployment including: (1) visible ortho-rectified aerial photographic images; (2) visible oblique geo-located photographic images; (3) wide-area high spatial resolution infrared GIS maps; (4) processed infrared spectra showing vapor species identified; (5) maps showing the location of flight paths and; (6) processed chemical data.

ASPECT used onboard data processing to accelerate the delivery of data. Both photographic and chemical were processed while in flight status and a data package was extracted from the aircraft using the satellite data system to provide timely situation updates concerning the overall flight mission. All data was reviewed by the ASPECT reach back team upon full transmission of the data set and once this process was completed, the data was transferred to the Region for use. Typically, data collected on a given day was available for use by the Region on the following day. The raw and processed data collected as part of the deployment was stored on secure File Transfer Protocol (FTP) sites which was also used by the Region and other authorized users for overall data management. Final data products provided to the Region include both Google Earth and ESRI types. A summary of the data structure and types is given in Table 4.

Access to ASPECT Data

All ASPECT data was provided in both a Google Earth and ESRI format. The following section provides a set of instructions on how to access and use the ASPECT data using the Google Earth n-link. Instructions on using the ESRI ArcData GIS should be directed to the Region 6 GIS Section.

Instructions for Using the ASPECT Google Earth n-link

The KML n-link file is a collection of Google Earth KML scripts that permits full viewing and download of data associated with a given deployment or project. Once the n-link has been loaded on your computer, subsequent installs of the link are unnecessary for the duration of the project or deployment; as new data is added to the project, the n-link, when opened will show the new data in chronological order. Two software packages are necessary to run the n-link. You will need an installed copy of Google Earth and a current copy of your favorite internet browser (Internet Explorer, Chrome, or Firefox) your internet browser.

How to use the attached KML file:

1. Save the KML file to your desktop.

2. To open it, double click the n-link icon and it will bring up your Google Earth Program. As the program starts, Google Earth will move to the general area of interest associated with the project and display an EPA ASPECT aircraft ICON. The ASPECT icon acts as a product menu allowing access to a data associated with the project. Clicking the airplane icon will open up a balloon showing the relevant products that are available for this particular ASPECT project.
3. The ASPECT aircraft icon and all other data products are associated with data layers that will show up on the left side of the image. When the n-link is first started the Aircraft Icon will show up as the first layer under the “Temporary Places” pane. As additional products are opened, they will in turn be listed under the Temporary Places pan in the order that they were opened.

Structure of the Aircraft Icon:

Data products that are currently available for viewing and/or download will be displayed under the Aircraft icon balloon. The following are examples of typical data and products that are accessible by the Aircraft icon:

A brief mission description.

Sensor suite capabilities

Mosaic Aerial Photography \(Optional\)

Oblique Photography

Aircraft Video

False color aerial infrared imagery

Gamma Ray Information

Aircraft F10 flight tracks and data

Weather station data \(used for chemical plume modeling\)

All of the products shown above in blue represent mission specific data links that can be accessed using the Aircraft icon. Simply clicking on any of the blue sections (within the Aircraft Icon) will activate that information link. What happens next depends on what link you have activated.

The following are brief descriptions of how to use each link: (Note: Be patient. How fast things occur depends on the network (internet) speeds. Higher resolution image products may take several minutes to load).

Sensor suite capabilities – Clicking on the Sensor suite capabilities will open a brief technical description of what sensors are located on the ASPECT system and the products that these sensors generate. To close the description window, click the button located in the top left of the description window titled “<< Back to Google Earth”.

Chemical data products – Clicking the Chemical data products will open a set of chronological data layers that will be displayed under the Temporary Places directory. The most recent set of data will be active with the older data sets closed. To open the older data sets, click on the box next to the flight number (Flight number and data) and the data will be opened. Locations in which chemicals were detected will show up as bulls eye data points in the Google Earth image. If a given data pointed is selected by clicking on it, the following information will be displayed:

- Chemical compound name
- System scan number
- Compound detection limit (in ppm)
- Compound concentration (in ppm)

Color aerial photography – Ortho-rectified color aerial imagery is available by clicking on the Color aerial photography. As with the chemical data products, selecting this option will automatically load the most recent collection of photographic data locations into Google Earth. Loaded data will be represented on the image by a camera icon and a transparent outline of the respective image. In addition, all images associated with the data set will be displayed under the directory “ASPECT Photos” on the Temporary Places directory. To load the actual image into Google Earth, click the corresponding camera icon of the interested photograph. This will open a data balloon showing a review of the image and two options located at the bottom of the balloon;

- Download Image Overlay into Google Earth - Clicking on this option will download the image into the Google Earth database. After the image is downloaded, it will be shown as an overlay on the main Google Earth image. This process can be repeated as many times as needed. Note: each time you execute this procedure the referenced aerial photograph frame will appear in blue in the temporary places pane on the left hand side of the Google Earth window
- Download High Resolution Image into Web Browser - This option is selected if the user wishes to view a full resolution image as a stand-alone product in a web browser. Depending internet speed, this option may take up to a few minutes to fully load the image. Once in the browser, the image can be copied and used for various publishing purposes.

Mosaic Aerial Photography (Optional) --- Selection of a color mosaic will load a georectified color mosaic into Google Earth. Selected of the appropriate image is referenced to the date of collection. Due to the large size of these files, several minutes may be required to fully download the file.

False color aerial infrared imagery - Geo-rectified false color aerial infrared imagery is obtained using this option. The color palette of this imagery is false since the data represents three IR bands combined to provide an RGB image. Manipulation of the images is done in a similar fashion as to the color aerial photography.

Note: When exiting Google Earth, you can save your temporary places so that they will be available the next time you want to look at this data. Alternatively, you can merely keep the KML file as your SAT key index into the EPA ASPECT website for accessing this data at a future time.

Oblique Photography -- Viewing of oblique color aerial photography is accomplished by selecting the oblique photography option. Once the option is selected, available oblique images for the last flight are displayed as a collection of arrows. These arrows represent the location that the aircraft was positioned and the direction the camera was pointed when the frame was collected (about 2 o'clock of the heading looking about 45 degrees down). As the cursor is moved over the respective arrows, the frame number will be highlighted. If an arrow is double clicked a thumb nail of the image will be displayed. The user has the option of downloading the image in a browser.

Aircraft Video - During most chemical related activities, airborne downward looking video is collected while the chemical sensors are active. This video is effectively a NTSC color 540 scan format collected in an AVI format. No special conversion is needed to view the video on a standard Windows computer. Selection of the video option will present data in a similar fashion as the other mission related products and will be identified as a small movie camera icon. Selection of an icon will provide the following information:

- Type -- Visible video
- Date – Date that the video was collected (based on UTC time)
- Time – UTC time
- Latitude – In decimal degrees
- Longitude – In decimal degrees
- Video file name
- Download Video option

To download the video to your local computer, click on the download video link and the video will open in a separate page asking if you wish to open the file with an installed media player (such as Windows Media Player) or to save the file for subsequent use. Irrespective, once the file is played, the video will show a color view looking down out of the aircraft.

Gamma Ray Information - If the ASPECT mission profile required that radiological data was collected, selection of the option would provide a set of gamma ray and neutron data products include:

- An aerial total gamma count vector map and contour
- A Sigma statistical analysis of the survey area
- An gamma energy exposure map and contour
- A neutron total count and contour map

Aircraft F10 Flight Tracks and Data - Flight track information for the last mission is available using this selection. Once selected, a color flight path will be displayed. Multiple tracks can be displayed by selecting additional paths from other missions. Flight tracks also shows locations were various sensor systems were in operation. This feature provides a convenient cross reference to examine data corresponding to areas the aircraft surveyed.

Weather Station Data – The final option on the icon is a collection of weather station reported data. This includes National Weather Service (NOAA) links as well as local State and aviation based links. These sources provide a convenient and up-to-date source for meteorological data including dispersion model initialization.

Data Listing

A list of data collected by flight is given in Appendix A.

8 Data Results

The ASPECT system automatically screens remote sensed data for 72 compounds in a near real-time fashion. Table 5 lists compounds included in the automated algorithm library. Detected compounds are reviewed/validated by a member of the reach back team using various tools including the use of spectral libraries to confirm the presence of indicated screened compounds. For other compounds (such as peroxides) manual methods using published IR spectra are used to develop both identification and concentration estimates.

* “Trace” detection represents a value slightly above (about 1 ppm) the limit of detection. If the detection limit is 12 ppm, a trace measurement would be 12 ppm plus approximately 1 ppm or a total of 13 ppm.

Representative Chemical Data Associated with Arkema Fire

ASPECT was used to provide airborne chemical surveillance of the Arkema facility from arrival on 30 August 2017 until the planned burning of the remaining onsite materials on 3 September 2017. The Arkema facility produced high concentration peroxides commonly used in the plastics market. Peroxides, by nature, are reactive compounds and are typically stored in a dilute state or are stabilized through means such as refrigeration. The company, forecasting possible storm damage, associated flooding and/or loss of electrical power, moved onsite peroxides from the facility refrigerated storage to trailer-based refrigerated storage (Figure 3). The facility was impacted by flood waters and after a period of time, the

on-site storage trailers began to warm up resulting in the peroxides beginning to react (catch fire). Facility personnel informed the Region that the trailers were equipped with remote temperature monitoring system. As the response progressed, this telemetric data provided an indication of the state of the products based on the contents temperature. The ASEPECT team did not have access to this data but used instead the systems integrated IR night vision thermal camera to provide a relative indication of temperature for each trailer. An example of this type of imagery is given in Figure 4.

As each trailer warmed and the contents increased in temperature, a definitive life cycle on how the contents reacted took place. Initial indication of a reaction was typically light white smoke. Remote chemical screening of the smoke showed a weak signature of peroxide (Figure 6). Soon after white smoke was observed, the contents would react fully resulting in a high intensity fire (Figure 7). This phase of the fire often generated a black plume which was most likely due to the trailer and tires burning. Within about 60 minutes the fire had consumed the contents of the trailer and the intensity rapidly decreased. Collected spectral data tended to show normal products of combustion and low levels of peroxide. (It should be noted that in a normal state, benzyl peroxide is a solid but once reacted, e.g. combustion, forms a vapor). The ASPECT system was used to remotely monitor the plume that was generated by the Arkema fires. Due to the reactive nature of peroxides, most of the compound reacted as a result of the fire, with only trace quantities (slightly above 5.3 ppm) observed immediately downwind of the fire. Figure 8 illustrates the intensity of a typical fire as observed using the IR camera.

On 3 September 2017, a decision was made by the local response officials to conduct a controlled burn of the remaining trailers of peroxides at the facility. ASPECT was requested to provide near real-time monitoring of the burn. Prior to ignition, the plane was placed in a two mile orbit around the facility. At 1540 (local) the crew reported a rapidly developing fire and initiated monitoring activities. Figure 9 shows a composite of an aerial image and the associated IR image clearly showing a developing fire.

The progression of the fire was rapid as illustrated in a time lapse collection of oblique images collected from the aircraft (figure 10). As with prior detections made over the Arkema fires, the trace signatures peroxide (limit of detection about 5 ppm), as well as peroxyacetyl nitrates (PAN) and ozone were detected in the immediate downwind smoke plume. Due to an easterly wind at altitude, ASPECT was requested to make a chemical sweep about 1 mile to the West (downwind) of the facility and found no significant chemical detections.

RNA Chemical Results

Throughout the RNA surveillance process, the ASPECT system was used to screen for the presence of chemical emissions at selected locations. All chemical facilities were screened and many non-chemical sites, such as RMP sites were screened. A summary of compounds detected is given in Table 6. A number of commonly occurring air pollutants such as ozone and PAN were routinely detected and were used to confirm that the FTIR spectrometer was operating properly (figures 12 and 13).

Figure 12: Passive (remotely detected at 2,800 ft AGL) FTIR spectra showing ozone, a commonly occurring air pollutant. This confirms that the instrument was operating properly.

Figure 13: Passive (remotely detected at 2,800 ft AGL) FTIR spectra showing PAN, a commonly occurring air pollutant. This confirms that the instrument was operating properly.

Of the compounds specified as part of the Data Quality Objectives, only 1-Butene was observed. 1-Butene is a linear alpha-olefin (alkene) associated with polyethylene manufacturing and is one of the compounds that ASPECT is automatically setup to detect. This compound was detected in low levels over and near a number of the chemical facilities in the region. Figure 14 shows typical IR spectra of 1-Butene as characteristic by the large peak centered around 950 wave number. Typical concentrations were just above the detection limit of the system or about 12 ppm.

9 Conclusion

The ASPECT system was requested on 30 August 2017 to assist Region 6 in the response to Hurricane Harvey. ASPECT flew 28 missions which encompassed over 100 flight hours throughout the time period of 30 August 2017 to 11 September 2017. 3064 aerial photos, 786 oblique photos and over 2.4 million FTIR interferograms were collected to provide data to support the Region. From 30 August 2017 through 3 September 2017 ASPECT flew daily missions (at times multiple flights on the same day) to provide airborne monitoring of the Arkema fire. Results of this data showed low levels of peroxide (approximately 5.3 ppm) and compounds of combustion associated with the chemical fires. Chemical monitoring as part of the RNA mission showed low levels of 1-Butene (12 ppm); a compound included on the data quality objectives list.
